

COSMOPOLITAN

EXPERTS

sex advice

from Amy Levine, Cosmo's Carnal Counselor

This Week's Sex Advice | Sex Advice Archive
Ask the Carnal Counselor | Meet the Counselor

"Why does my guy fantasize about me having sex with other men?"

Q During sex, my man graphically describes other men having sex with me. He really seems to enjoy it, and I don't know what to say to him about it. Can you help me understand his fantasy?

A Believe it or not, this is a very common male fantasy. As for why these kinky thoughts get your man going, there could be a million reasons: Maybe he let his imagination run wild one night, and since you didn't dissuade him, he assumed you were as into it as he was. Or, it could be that the idea of other guys wanting "his woman" feeds his ego. He may also become turned on visualizing you with other men because it allows him to see you as a completely sexual object. Or, perhaps thinking of other guys pleasuring you alleviates his own performance pressure. It could be any of these reasons -- or none of them -- and the truth is, your dude might not even know himself.

So rather than get caught up trying to figure out the root of his fantasy, figure out how it makes you feel. Since your guy feels safe sharing his most intimate thoughts with you, you should be as open with him. If his graphic descriptions make you uneasy, let him know. Don't make a big deal out of it; you don't want to make him feel bad. Simply tell him that his erotic daydream doesn't turn you on, and you'd appreciate it if he'd keep this one to himself. You can also suggest some sexy scenarios that will turn you on. If you do find his carnal comments about other men exciting, however, jump in and add your own titillating thoughts, so his fantasy becomes something you share that electrifies the experience for both of you.

© iVillage Inc. 1995-2005. All rights reserved. terms of service